Solemnity of All Saints: Wed., Nov. 1 is All Saints Day and a holy day of obligation. On this day we honor the saints, the holy men and women who lived and died as faithful disciples of Jesus. We are called to honor all the saints in heaven. We do this by learning from the example of their lives so we come to a deeper understanding of what it means to live as faithful disciples of Jesus. By asking them to pray and to intercede to God on our behalf, may we grow in holiness and stand steadfast in faith.

Congratulations to Greg Bouza & Rita Dubiel

who celebrated the sacrament of marriage last week.

Education/Formation

FAMILY TALK TIME Celebrating Sunday for Catholic Families, Sara McGinnis Lee
What would it look like to love with your whole heart, mind and soul?

► Reflecting on the Word: There are no laws, rules, or even talents and merits that can surpass love. Love for God, others and self should be all-consuming. It should pervade our hearts, minds and souls so much there is no space for anything else. The way Jesus spoke of the commandments gives us a clue as to how to live them. Instead of giving a list of what not to do, he tells us to focus on what and who we should be. When this becomes our focus, there is room for nothing else in our life but love.

► Living the Word: Bring the family into the prayer space and discuss how doing God's will starts with loving ourselves. Encourage family members to pay attention to the way they talk to themselves this week. Ask them to think about whether they love themselves the way God loves them, or if they criticize themselves. Next, everybody should write down something kind to say to a person with whom they have had a hard time getting along. Can the family think of a time to say these kind words?

► Trunk-n-Treat: Sun., Oct. 29, 4-5:30pm at East Campus. All Parish families are invited to participate in this fun-filled afternoon.

30th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Biagio Mazza, Celebration

Jesus was confronted by the Pharisees regarding the rules good, upstanding Jews should observe. "Which one of the Torah regulations is at the core of all the other commandments?" With so many rules and regulations, some would get more attention than others. The lawyer's question in today's Gospel, while apparently meant to test Jesus, is a legitimate question: "Teacher, which commandment in the law is the greatest?"

Jesus responds by quoting two commands from the law which, for him, encompasses all the others: Love God and love your neighbor as yourself. Loving God is the first and the greatest commandment: therefore, by extension, loving neighbor as self is equivalent to loving God. Jesus affirms that "the whole law and the prophets depend on these two commandments." While this linking was not unique to Jesus, it does get at the heart of Jesus' mission and ministry.

The reading from Exodus greatly concretized Jesus' teaching. The alien, the widow, the orphan and the poor are our neighbors. In most societies, these people are vulnerable in so many ways because they have little or no legal or economic rights, privileges or power. Their survival depends on the goodness, generosity and compassion of others.

We are commanded to treat others with compassion because our loving God is merciful and compassionate towards us, most especially when we are in need. Our God is slow to anger and rich in kindness, not counting our offenses against us. Such loving relationship with God empowers us to call upon God in our need. Jesus and all of Scripture affirm that God hears our cry for help and responds with generosity and compassion. We too need to respond in kind, for we are the living presence and image of God to one another

Who is My Neighbor

Celebration

For Matthew's Jesus, love of God and neighbor as self are the interpretive key to what the "kingdom of heaven" is like. The final sentence of today's passage clearly expounds what is essential in living in fidelity to God's will and purpose: "The whole law and the prophets depend on these two commandments." The law and the prophets are synonyms for all of God's revealed word. Jesus is saying that these two commandments are the lens, criteria and basis for carrying out all the other commandments.

Matthew's Jesus also expands Jewish understanding of the neighbor. In Leviticus 19 neighbor is understood to be only a fellow Israelite. However in the Sermon on the Mount in Matthew, Jesus clearly states that God desires us to love enemies and to pray for those who persecute you (5:43-44). In other words, the care and concern for the neighbor is thoroughly inclusive and expansive. It includes the entire human family: the loved one and the enemy. It demands not just general concern for the other but very specific demands of attunement to the needs of the other and the obligations to meet those needs. These two passages specify the obligation to feed, clothe, visit and care for the other no matter the circumstances.

On Loving "Me"

Carolyn A. Wright, Celebration

How do I love me? Let me count the ways. That's right, you heard me: "How do I love me."

Our world is fraught with fear, isolation, injustice and violence. What might be at root? Certainly unbridled ego and arrogance, unrestrained anger and resentment, untethered pain and desperation play crucial roles in the escalation of the destruction of civility, acceptance and promise. Love your neighbor as yourself. How do you love you? How do I love me? What is at root? I wonder.

I wonder: If I accept and embody the gifts of faith, hope and love – God's free offering to all humanity – might I begin to truly understand what it means to love me? Might I accept God's virtue of love to quell my unbridled ego and arrogance? Receive God's virtue of faith to temper my unrestrained anger and resentment? Assent to God's virtue of hope to heal my pain and desperation and in turn, make a turn in my daily living to civility, acceptance and promise.

I wonder, what is at root? If we accept and embody the gifts of faith, hope and love, might we turn together toward the One who offers us the true root of our being?

"May your love for me, Lord, move me to love my neighbor."
