FROM FR. TOM'S DESK

Thirteenth Sunday (Ordinary Time) Patricia Sanchez, Celebration

Through his experience of God at Horeb, Elijah learned that while his ministry was important, he was not irreplaceable, nor was he unique in his faithfulness to God. He also learned that another prophet would succeed him and God's work would go on without missing a beat.

In today's first reading, Elijah is freshly returned from his escape to the desert and his theophany at Horeb. Here, he hands off his mantle, the symbol of his prophetic service, and Elisha begins to speak for God. From these two prophets, we learn that the work is God's, and ours is but one voice, one life among many whom God has called to serve.

Paul, who gave his voice and his life to preach the Gospel to the gentiles, offers a lesson on freedom. Writing to believers in Galatia, Paul insisted that freedom is not about satisfying every human appetite. Rather, the freedom Jesus won for sinners is something we are to exercise in the loving service of one another.

When the disciples traveling to Jerusalem with Jesus tried to serve the Samaritans, they were rebuffed. Angry that anyone would dare to refuse them, the disciples wanted to see their centuries-old enemies suffer the fiery consequences of their actions. But Jesus, who was patient and tolerant, refused to use his power to punish the Samaritans despite their bad behavior.

One Prophet to Another (1 Kings 19) Celebration

God's choice of Elisha as prophet is signified in the action by Elijah, who threw his cloak over him. The action of casting a garment over another was understood as a sign of ownership and/or responsibility or as a sign of the investiture and designation of a successor. Later, when Elijah's service had come to an end and he was taken up to heaven in a whirlwind, Elisha would pick up the mantle that had fallen from his departing colleague's shoulders and wear it as a sign of God's continuing communication with the people through him.

That Elisha's willingness to accept the responsibility of being God's prophet required a clean break with his past is vividly illustrated by the ancient author. Elisha's resolve to follow his mentor is transparent; in a surprising and magnanimous gesture of detachment, he made an enormous "barbecue" using his plows to grill his oxen for his people before taking leave of them. To put it another way, he shifted the basis of his security from himself (his farm, his oxen, etc.) to God. In this, he prefigures the clean break with the past and total gift of himself to the ministry that Jesus would ask of his disciples centuries later.

Not Freedom From but Freedom To (Galatians 5)

Celebration

Paul understood and valued the clean break of discipleship as a freeing experience and would have his readers share that same understanding. Free of all that is not Christ, that is not good, that is not holy, the detachment of the disciple enables him/her to be wholly given over to all that is Christ, to all that is good, to all that is holy. Paul was quick to remind them that the freedom they now enjoyed in Christ was not a freedom from, but a freedom to.

Call and Response (Luke 9) Celebration

The three scenarios of the would-be disciples capture the point of the Gospel. Strains of the Elijah-Elisha story are apparent in this passage. To enter fully into discipleship means to commit to a lifelong and life-giving relationship. Such a commitment demands the constant moving forward without looking back to what was or was not accomplished. It also entails letting go of those relationships that would hinder the freedom to move the mission forward and to move forward with the mission.

Of the three persons whom Jesus invites to follow him, the first one is impulsive. He is willing to follow Jesus wherever Jesus goes. Surprisingly, Jesus does not encourage him. He gives him a warning instead. The other two would-be disciples want to take care of home matters before they cast their lot as disciples. Discipleship and its related missionary activity, that is proclaiming the reign of God in word and deed, demands a certain single-heartedness and single-mindedness (Luke 14:25-33).

The Gospel sends forth the invitation today, whatever stage we find ourselves in. The important point is to embrace justice, righteousness, lovingkindness, and steadfastness.

Our Response

John Meoska, OSB, Collegeville

These scriptures invite us to reflect on our call to discipleship. Like Elijah and Elisha, and like Jesus' friends in the gospel, we have been called and given the mantle of discipleship in baptism. On some level, God is calling each of us to fulfill our role in proclaiming the kingdom of God. Have I put my hand to the plow, definitively and wholeheartedly, or am I playing the artful dodger? It's so easy to put God off with distractions and diversions. I can get lost in endless activities, including many noble and good things and avoid the unum necessarium.

By those same baptismal waters, God has freed us from the yoke of slavery to sin. Saint Paul reminds us that this freedom is not for our indulgence but for our self-spending. When the Spirit entered Elisha, he left his own modest endeavors to serve the prophet Elijah. When we are animated by the Spirit, we become free of the law, free in love, free to spend ourselves in service of each other.

"Lord, may I always follow you."

Dear Lord,

We thank you for our freedom. We thank you for the rights, opportunities, and happiness we enjoy as citizens of the United States.

We pray for the military men and women who serve our country, for we know that our freedom is not free. Like your son, Jesus Christ, who died to save all people from sin, these brave Americans sacrifice so that all citizens of our country may live freely.

We ask you to be with our nation's leaders. Guide them in decision-making and empower them with the Holy Spirit's gifts of right-judgement and wisdom. May they act in your grace, preserving dignity and moving this country along a path of compassion and peace.

Bless this great nation, Dear God. We pray that we may follow the examples of the Americans who founded this country and to live in courage and brotherhood.

We pray this and all things, O God, in your name and in your love.

Amen

EDUCATION/FORMATION

Family Talk Time Celebrating Sunday for Catholic Families, Sara McGinnis Lee

When was a time you put God first and it helped you accomplish something more easily?

Reflecting on the Word: At first glance, this reading seems harsh, but Jesus' words portray the reality of discipleship. Following Jesus is the Christian's first priority, no matter the importance or worthiness of other matters and relationships. When God is first in our lives, all else will fall in place. What do you let get in the way of your vocation to follow the Lord?

Living the Word: Choose an afternoon for the family to put God first in an obvious way. Encourage each family member to say a prayer before each activity or dedicate the activity to God in some way. While washing dishes or brushing teeth, you may thank God for dishes to wash or teeth to brush. Little children may need to pair up with someone older. Encourage participants to notice if expressing gratitude changes how these tasks are done.

FLOOR REPLACEMENT – ST. ANTHONY CHURCH

As long as the St. Anthony property remains with us, we are responsible for its upkeep. For years, we have been dealing with the gym floor. It has gotten to the point of being a safety hazard with tiles loosening throughout. Members of the Administration Committee have been investigating the proper and most economical replacement. A recommended product was presented to that Committee and to the Parish Council and was approved by both. Last week, the diocese gave its approval. It takes 6-8 weeks to order from China (and tariffs will incur). It should be in place for the start of school. The appraised price of the property will be increased by $27,200.

ANNIVERSARY THOUGHTS...

The 28th day of June marked my 50th anniversary of ordination to the priesthood. I was ordained in the Sacred Heart Hospital Chapel, which was across the street from the American college where I lived for four years while studying theology at the University of Louvain in Belgium.

As with life itself, the years merge together and so do the assigned parishes and parishioners as well as the various ministerial activities during the way. What remains constant, however, are the wonderfully faith-filled people who have inspired and supported me in a way that enabled me in ministry and brought me the satisfaction and fulfillment that made possible my continuation from one year to the next and to the next.

While there may be some pride in reaching this milestone, believe me, there is more humility. As Gabriel said to Mary at the time of the Annunciation, "With God, all things are possible." I say, "Amen" to that and "Deo gratias" for all that has been.

After a reception to mark the occasion, I will continue to do ministry Deo volente flumina non crescente ~ God willing and the creek don't rise.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Fr. Tom". The signature is stylized with a large, sweeping flourish above the name.

Fr. Tom
